

When everything is thrown up in the air, make sure the money lands exactly where you want.

If you die suddenly, protection insurance will keep your family financially secure.

And by writing your life insurance policy in trust, any payout won't form part of your estate.

This means the money passes to your family without inheritance tax. A trust also stops payments being held up by any legal issues. Making sure the money reaches the people you left it to, when they need it most.

The benefits of putting your plan in trust:

- A trust costs nothing to put in place
- It gets the money to the people you intended it for – fast
- It could save thousands of pounds in inheritance tax

So, if you're planning on taking out protection, put it in trust. It won't cost a penny but could prove to be priceless.
